The Museum of Bath at Work is Bath's museum of local, social and commercial history, and for over forty years has been telling quite a different story to the one you might know. Our archives and collections range from tourism, building, cabinet making, quarrying, engineering, soft drinks manufacture, hand-loom weaving, and even corset making... to the high tech creative industries of the 21st century.

If we are to carry on our important work, the support of the Friends of the Museum of Bath at Work is vital. We operate with just one member of staff and a team of volunteers.
